IS QUALIFIED AS A CERTIFIED PESTICIDE APPLICATOR AS SPECIFIED IN THE SOUTH CAROLINA PESTICIDE CONTROL ACT

Reciprocal Certification

* Florida has developed reciprocal agreements with six other states to allow applicators licensed or certified in those states to obtain a Florida license without being retested. These agreements were developed based on frequency of applicator request for reciprocity and similar competency standards between states. Except for the agreement with North Carolina, the agreements apply only to public and commercial applicators. They do not apply to private applicators because of differences in competency standards for private applicators among states. The North Carolina agreement applies to private, public and commercial applicators.

Reciprocal agreements waive the requirement for applicators certified in reciprocal states, agencies, and tribes to take the Florida certification exams. However, the license requirement is not waived. All individuals who apply restricted use pesticides in Florida or who apply any pesticide in Florida by aerial delivery must have a Florida license issued by the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

Following is a summary of the categories of certification covered by each agreement.

Reciprocal Agreement Summary

FDACS may also be able to reciprocate on a case by case basis with other states, federal agencies, and tribal governments with EPA-approved pesticide certification programs, depending on the type of certification and categories held. When an individual requests a Florida license based on a certification or license issued by another state, federal agency, or tribe, the Pesticide Certification Section contacts the issuing agency to verify the type of certification and categories held. If the certification and categories held correspond with Florida categories and competency standards are similar, reciprocal certification may be granted.

Applicators getting licensed in Florida based on reciprocal certification with other states, agencies, or tribes must provide proof of certification or license from the issuing agency. Applicators must have taken the certification exams provided by the reciprocal state agency or tribe rather than having obtained certification there by reciprocity with another agency.

A Florida license based on reciprocal certification will expire at the same time as the reciprocal license or certification, or no more than four years from month of issue.

Points to Remember about using reciprocal certification to get a Florida license:

- Reciprocal certification does not waive the requirement for a Florida license.
- Reciprocal agreements (guaranteed reciprocity) apply only to public and commercial applicators in the states listed in the above chart. Exception: the North Carolina agreement also applies to private applicators.
- Reciprocal certification may be possible with states, agencies, and tribes without a reciprocal agreement in place, on a case by case basis.
- Non-Florida residents must comply with out-of-state requirements.
- Florida licenses can be issued for a term of no more than 4 years, so the expiration date on the Florida license may not be the same as the expiration date on the reciprocal license.
